Facing changes in the Legal Market

Tools for lawyers

THEME

“Great changes in the legal market: a movement towards the commoditization of legal services; a shift toward ‘decomposing’ legal work into its constituent tasks and sourcing each in the most efficient way; a related increase in the out-sourcing of legal work; the emergence of new forms of legal business; a rapid increase in the impact of various disruptive information technologies; and much more besides.”

Pablo Van Klinken

"Our founding vision was for an easy-to-use, online service that helped people create their own legal documents. The result is LegalZoom, the nation's leading online legal document service. From the beginning, our mission was to set new standards for convenience and service in an industry not typically known for great customer care. We believe it should be easy for anyone to take care of common legal matters. For us, the goal is not simply to provide a smart, cost-effective alternative—it's to make sure everyone gets the legal protection they need. For us, putting the law within reach of millions of people is more than just a novel idea—it's the founding principle."

- 16.00 - 16.15 Coffee Break
- 16.15 Fergus O'Connell: "project management for Lawyers"

Fergus O'Connell

"The necessary expertise on project management, which is involved with legal work can best be outsourced. Most law firms or advocates have no knowledge, needed in the field of project management and they can better occupy themselves with matters that create added value. 99% of the advocates have no idea what project management really is. Law faculties within Universities should provide students with courses on project management."
